Book Review

Robin Sharma is well known author of leadership books. The book Who will cry when you die is based on Sanskrit saying 'When you are born the World rejoice while you cry. Live a life in a such a way that when you die, the World should cry and you rejoice' Everyone wants to live our life joyfully and die peacefully and for this purpose author robin Sharma publicized 101 life principles in this book which we should follow.

I like some important points which robin Sharma enunciate in this book and they are difference between important things and urgent things

- Difference between surviving/staying and living.
- Keep our goals close to our heart which will help us to achieve it faster
- Stop Complaining. Start Living.
- Enjoy the path, not just reward
- Honor our past. Treat our troubles as blessings.
- Reading books is a good habit but, Reading good books is a better habit.
